Sut i Ddechrau

1. Llywiwch draw i www://coflein.gov.uk/cy/
2. Cliciwch ar y maes “Chwilio” er mwyn chwilio ar draws archifau a chofnodion safle CBHC.

3. Er enghraifft, teipiwch ‘Bryngaer’ a gwasgwch y fysell [[enter]]er mwyn chwilio am gaerau yng Nghymru. Bydd rhestr o Safleoedd ac Archifau’n ymddangos. Ar gyfer yr enghraifft yma rydym yn edrych ar ganlyniadau tab Safleoedd.

Defnyddio'r Panel Ffilter a Ffilter Delwedd Ar-lein

- Cliciwch ar 'Math o Safle' (yn y panel Ffilter ar yr ochr chwith) er mwyn mireinio eich canlyniadau chwilio a dangos y rhai hynny rydych chi'n eu dewis yn unig. Bydd y ddewislen yn ehangu er mwyn dangos yr holl fathau o safleoedd sydd wedi eu cofnodi.

The screenshot shows the search results interface for 'Safle' (Site). The left-hand 'Ffilter' (Filter) panel is expanded to show 'Math O Safle' (Type of Site) selected. The main content area displays a grid of search results for 'Delweddau Ar-Lein Yn Unig' (Single Online Images). The results are filtered by 'Perthnasedd' (County) to 'BRYNGAER'. The grid shows several entries, each with an aerial photograph, an NPRN number, a location name, and a count of images and records. Some entries are marked as having no digital images available.

Few Welsh prehistoric sites capture the imagination as powerfully as Tre'r Ceiri hillfort which dominates the Llyn Peninsula from the easternmost summit of the three-peaks of Yr Eifl. Looking down from a scree-strewn summit at a height of 485m O.D., Tre'r Ceiri is one of the best preserved Iron Age hillforts in Britain where round houses, gateways and ramparts can be seen in a remarkably intact condition. Tre'r Ceiri occupies a steeply-sloping site whose summit is occupied by a substantial Early Bronze Age burial cairn, clearly preserved and respected within the later hillfort. The main hillfort is enclosed by a formidable single rampart which still stands up to 3.5m high in places. Where nearly intact, the top of the rampart still has its parapet walk reached via a number of sloping ramps from the interior. This wall is broken by two main gateways, both of which funnelled visitors through narrow, restrictive passages, as well as three 'posterns' or minor gateways, one of which at least was designed to allow inhabitants out down a narrow mountain path to gather water from a spring. Beyond the main hillfort is a second partial outer wall, reinforcing more vulnerable approaches on the north and west sides. This too is broken by an outer gateway which overlies an earlier approach track to the hillfort, probably indicating that this outer defence was a secondary work. spectacular views across the Llŷn Peninsula but the entrance passage and walls are low and partly obscured by tumbled stone.

There are a handful of smaller postern gateways, as with Garn Goch. The best-preserved example towards the summit of the fort was re-roofed in the recent works..

Inside the hillfort we see one of the most clearly visible Iron Age and Roman villages in Britain. Tre'r Ceiri remains an arresting hillfort to visit, almost a 'Welsh Pompeii' considering its levels of preservation. Yet the crowded housing here is unusual. The early Iron Age roundhouses were later subdivided in Romano-British times and later added to again with clusters of D-shaped buildings and crude shelters. At least one house, hut 41 against the southern rampart, may have been used for burial suggested by the unusual find of a beaded collar from the building; such finds usually accompany Iron Age and Roman burials. A further example is recorded from nearby Clynnog...'

The section is labeled 'TRE'R CEIRI' and 'SECTION THROUGH RAMPART AT 1560 FT. CONTOUR ON NORTH'. A scale bar is provided below the section, showing 0 to 20 feet and 0 to 5 metres. The map also shows a plan view of the site with various features and contours. The interface includes a search bar at the top right with the text 'Dangoswch 25 i bob tudalen Didoli Dyddiad (Esqynnol)' and a navigation bar with buttons for '1', '2', and '3'. The '2' button is highlighted with an orange circle.
